FROM PUGET SOUND.

OLYMPIA, JULY, 28th, 1867.

For nearly every day for the past two weeks it has rained more or less, and as a consequence has caught many of our farmers with a portion of their hay crop cut. Some of it will be lost, having rotted on the ground, but much of it will yet be saved, if the weather clears up, which it now has the appearance of doing. The crop is scanty at best.

The Congo Troupe of minstrels performed again on Monday and Tuesday evenings, to very good audiences. Their performances were a shade better than the "regular bilks" which the good people here are accustomed to—and that is not saying a great deal. They have left for higher latitudes, north.

The Wilson divorce suit has had a change of venue granted, on the alleged ground that prejudice would prevent a fair trial of the case, in this district. This is the Darwin affair, and it will now go the third district, before Judge Wyche, at such time and place as he may select. Wilson advertises his wife as having left his bed and board, but resists the granting of the divorce. Curious, isn't it?

General James Tilton, of the railroad survey, arrived in town last evening and will immediately organize the surveying parties. Mr. W. H. Carlton, formerly of this place, will have charge of the party to examine Packwood's Pass, south of Mt. Ranier, and Mr. J. S. Hurd, an attaches of the Surveyor General's office, of this Territory, will explore Snoqualmie Pass. Everybody has got the Pacific Railroad on the brain. I have got it! I talk about it, think about it, dream about it and write about it. It is my chief hobby by day and my air castles by night. I believe in it—believe it can be built through Stevens' five mile tunnel of the Cascades; anywhere across the "Grand Coulee," or over the top of Mt. Ranier. It should pass through every man's farm, and have a depot at every man's door. Every town on Puget Sound should be the great terminus, where the great city is to be built and the commerce of the world will concentrate. I object to its going north of Snoqualmie, because that is too far north, and also to its south, down the Columbia and across to the Sound, because that is untenable. It must come across the Cascades at some inaccessible point, because there is where we want it. Now, I have got a particular route where it is bound to come at last; but am not going to make it public to the world until remunerated for so doing. Consequently your correspondent will abide his time, say two years. Two years' time makes a great deal of difference with some people—for instance, 1865 to 1867. A man who would have cut my throat in '65 might be my political friend in '67.

The wool crop of this market will be shipped this week by our merchants to San Francisco. That of this county, and Chehalis, some of Lewis and Pierce, comes here for a market. Its lowest estimate is thirty-five thousand pounds, and the probable out of seven or eight thousand head of sheep. This is about one-fifth that could be raised if the farmers had an inducement to produce more. Eighteen cents per pound is the ruling price paid here for it, and costs the shippers at least three cents more to ship it. No better wool is produced in the United States, but of course the sandy prairies around Puget Sound get no credit for it. It is assorted at San Francisco and the finest sent to New York, where, like the best Oregon wool, it receives the name of "California wool."

The Puget Sound Steam Navigation Company have fixed their capital stock at $80,000, in eight hundred shares, and have been of late disposing of these shares to the business men along the Sound. They are determined that cheap traveling and cheap freights shall continue. This company own the fast steamer New World, and carry the mails once a week, up and down. An effort was made last spring to get a semi-weekly service, this steamer being fully competent to carry it that often, or oftener if necessary, but as yet not a word has been heard about it. No greater service is needed on the coast, and although a petition has been forwarded to the proper quarters, and his Serene Highness, Postal Agent Brooks, humbly requested to graciously smile upon us, we are not even told whether we don't deserve it, or that somebody else don't want it done. The people would like to hear something, even if they are told to stop crying about it.

The bark Buena Vista, Captain Kilton, arrived in the Sound from Hong Kong, on the 22d inst., 47 days from port. She left in port the American bark Milroag, bound for Manilla to load with sugar for the Eastern States—freightage, $10 per ton. Also in port, barkentine Emma Augustus, and schooner Fannie Harris, both to sail for San Francisco in eight days.

The Contested Election at Walla Walla.

In the case of H. M. Hodgis vs. A. Seitel, involving the title to the office of Sheriff of Walla Walla county, Judge Chase, on Monday last, rendered the following decision. We copy from the Statesman:

Hodgis and Seitel were candidates for the sheriffalty of this county at the last June election; after the returns had been duly canvassed, the certificate of election was issued to Seitel, he having received the highest number of votes. Hodgis claims that there were illegal votes cast for Seitel, and that the returns from Patahs precinct are illegal and should not be counted. The various authorities referred to by counsel have been carefully examined. The statutes of Washington Territory, after providing the time of holding, and manner of conducting elections, enact that "one of the certificates, with poll list and tally paper, oath of Inspector, Judges and Clerks, shall be sealed up by the Inspector and endorsed, "Election returns," and be directed or sent to the County Auditor of the county in which the election is held; the one from Patahs conforms in substance to this enactment, and the only material want of form from the evidence of the County Auditor, is that the oath of the officers of election did not accompany it; this does not imply that the oaths were not taken, and proves nothing to the point in the case, as the papers returned are sufficient evidence to show that an election had taken place and the result. The fact that one of the persons who acted as an officer of election in Patahs precinct was not appointed by the Board of Commissioners brings the supposition that he was so appointed by the electors at the polls, and will be so considered.

All the authorities examined seem to agree that a strict compliance with the provisions of the statutes directing the mode of proceedings by public officers is not essential to the validity of the proceedings unless it is so declared in the statutes. This rule should especially apply to officers of elections as to omissions through ignorance of the law, particularly when we consider the class of persons who are necessarily selected to fill these positions in country precincts. The conclusion from all the evidence we have is that Seitel is legally entitled to the office in question, having received a majority of legal votes. The election, therefore, is confirmed, with judgment against the plaintiff for costs.

H. M. CHASE, Probate Judge.
Walla Walla, W. T., June 22d, 1867.

STOPPING WORK.—The Alta gives names and figures to show that parties who contemplated the erection of dwellings in San Francisco, the cost of which would have equalled seven hundred thousand dollars, have abandoned the idea at present, on account of the late eight-hour movement. It says:

This sum does not include the amount that parties had determined to invest this year, which at a low figure is estimated at one million more. It was believed that the present season would be the best for the building interest since the occupation of California by Americans, but it turns out, according to information received, to be the worst. No contracts for the erection of large buildings are being made or contemplated—in fact, men of means, large and small, hold back until the eight-hour question is settled.

Excited Frenchman at Niagara Falls: "Ah, dis is de grand spectakel! Superarb! Magnifique! By Gar! he is come down first-rate!"

"The Rocky Mountains."

There is something desolate, cold and cheerless suggested by the words "Rocky Mountains." We remember in our younger days, the account of the crossing by John C. Fremont exciting very unpleasant emotions, for though in those days, and under the existing circumstances, when the white man was a stranger in these regions, the trip was exceedingly perilous, there was also a vague impression conveyed to the public mind, of vast and rugged peaks enwrapped in immense sides of broken rocks, the upheavings of ages, and the debris of terrible convulsions, the hillsides were supposed to be as bare of vegetation as the deserts of Sahara; and mountain torrents, beautiful and grand in effect, but dangerous and uncertain in their course, were alone supposed to vary the scene of chaos and ruin, from the arid base to the snow-clad summits, whose white tops pierced the sky in silent, cold and repulsive grandeur.

To this day, there is much of the same uncertainty amongst the masses of men. Our mines of silver and gold alone seem to present attractiveness. Our genial climate, though generally admitted to be healthful and invigorating, is supposed to be relieved by no other inducements for the residence of man, and to be in effect neutralized by the want of the common accompaniments of vegetable life.

As the mountains are approached, the same idea is by no means expelled, the mountains look black and dismal, and all the darker from the contrast of the pure and glittering snow that covers the everlasting peaks. But upon approaching their base, and entering into the dark foot hills, the dark masses assume the form and color of nature and one is struck with the rich [illegible] trees, apparently all pine. The boundless [illegible] seem sufficient to supply the wants of [illegible] Growing on all sides of the mountains [illegible] across multiply with an areal space, [illegible] surface are crowded into furlongs of [illegible] and luxuriant grasses soon come into [illegible] in great variety, and of hues bright [illegible] gladden the eye on every side, when the [illegible] lusion fades away and the stranger [illegible] spite the wild and rugged peaks, [illegible] midst of rough upheavals and fur[illegible] ings, there appears spots of ri[illegible] might be made into luxuriant [illegible] the gulch, along the bases of mo[illegible] often far up and over on their [illegible] rich black soil, frequently many [illegible] which, under the skillful manag[illegible] would in this electric climate, [illegible] California in luxuriousness of [illegible] the many streams that ooze out on every hand [illegible] ford the most ample means for irrigation.

ABOUT BROWNLOW'S MILITIA.—Swinton, [illegible] correspondent of the New York Times, now [illegible] eling in the South, writes to that journal [illegible] Bristol, (Tenn.,) concerning the stories of outrages by "Brownlow's militia," which have made a prominent feature of the Democratic papers [illegible] some time:

And in this connection I must say a word, in concluding this letter, touching the conduct of Brownlow's militia here, about which a false report, which I have never seen contradicted, was promulgated some time ago. There are a company of militia encamped at about a mile from town; it is a full company, and consists of seventy-five white men and thirty-five blacks, under Captain Grisham. The report was that they had been kicking up a great row horseabouts. Now I have seen a good deal of the Captain and his company, and have talked with the people of the town about them, and there is not a rebel in the place who can say that the men have behaved otherwise than with perfect decency, propriety and good order since they came here three weeks ago. Indeed, there is not a person in Bristol who does not bear cheerful witness to their excellent conduct. The Captain is a peaceable, good natured, sensible fellow, though he did make quite a fool of himself the other day in summoning three Justices of the Peace to come to camp and decide between a man and his wife in some family row.

WHAT WAS FOUND.—The Montana Post of the 9th of July has the following:

The soldiers having sent in the scalp of the first Indian shot on the Yellowstone, as a memento to Col. Black, he was considerably astonished to find, on examining the scalp lock, braided in with the coarse hair of the Indian, a fine brown tress of white woman's hair. He was a "friendly" Indian, of course. Some lady presented it to him to show her affection for the creature, no doubt. A "friendly" wouldn't murder a woman and braid her locks in his. They are such innocent, abused creatures, and the white men of the West are such brutes, vide George Francis Train and the N. Y. Tribune. They would not steal horses, either. The Governor of Kansas estimates that there has been only five thousand men, women and children slaughtered by the savages within a year, yet some Western men are insane enough to demand redress. The blind obstinacy of demanding permission, if not protected, to be permitted to protect themselves, appears to be the prevailing sinful characteristic of the people throughout the Indian country at present. How a white man can think of taking the life of one of the red skins who dangles in his vermin breeding scalp lock the tresses torn from the bleeding corpse of a wife, mother, sister or daughter, is incomprehensible to some people. They do not live in this section, however.

A BRIDGE UNDER WATER.—A good story is told of a distinguished mathematician in the army, remarkable for a want of practical judgment sometimes seen in other mathematician. This officer was ordered to construct a bridge over a creek in the Southern country. He built it, working out the arch by mathematical formulas. When it was done the bridge was found to be under water. He, called to explain, said, "Oh, the work is all right, Strength of the Rebel Armies During the War.

The records of the "Confederate States of America," which fell into the hands of our armies at the close of the great struggle, will form a most important part of the materials from which future histories of the conflict will be written. Patient study and laborious investigation will be required to sift these documents and compare their statements with facts already known; hence before we get a strictly authentic history there must be time to collate the multifarious sources of information, which, as yet, it has been impossible to do. A point about which there has been much difference of opinion is the strength the rebel armies attained during the war, and preserved through its various stages. The official returns from rebel sources came into possession of the Government at the downfall of the "Confederacy," and have lately been given with much fullness of detail by some of the Eastern journals. These returns show that the rebel armies reached the highest point in numbers and efficiency in 1863, when the Gettysburg campaign began. The whole force then amounted to a trifle less than half a million of men. When Lee took command of the Army of Virginia in 1862, it numbered a little over 100,000. This was the force employed during the "Seven Days," when McClellan was driven back from his position in front of Richmond to James river. McClellan's army was nearly equal to Lee's in point of numbers, but was separated in divisions which successively received the shock of the whole rebel army, and which in consequence, were successively defeated. In the beginning of the campaign which ended with the rebel defeat at the great battle of Antietam, Lee's force was, nominally, 137,000 men; the number reported for duty was a little under 100,000. The next return, made in the month following this disastrous campaign, shows a loss of 40,000. At the beginning of the campaign which terminated with the battle of Gettysburg and the retreat from Pennsylvania, Lee stated his force at 88,756 effective men. At the close of this campaign, his force present for duty, amounted to 53,611, showing a loss of over 35,000 men in these aggressive operations. In November, 1864, the returns showed a nominal force of upwards of 181,000, of whom about 90,000 were reported for duty. The record of the army ceases with the 28th of February, 1865, about one month prior to the capture of Richmond. At that date the rolls of the army bore the names of 160,411 men, of whom 73,349 were reported present. This force was quite as if not more than the army of Virginia had been since the battle of Gettysburg, and the showing disproves the assertion which has often been made that Lee's army was reduced to almost nothing when it commenced the series of movements in the spring of 1865 that resulted in breaking the rebel lines and opening the way to Richmond. The greatest strength of Lee's army during the war was about 100,000 effectives, and except in winter when there were no active military operations its available strength seldom fell short of 90,000.

The Army of Tennessee, the second of the great armies of the rebellion, reached its maximum strength in June 864, when Sherman was pushing Johnston back toward Atlanta. The number of men present at that date was 77 441. The number on the rolls was upwards of 137,000. By December of the same year this force had dwindled under Hood, to 23,000 effectives. Hood's advance shows the rebel losses in the fierce fighting that ensued under Hood's leadership. In his attempt to beat back Sherman and recover Tennessee he must have lost at least 50,000 men. His army at the time of the battle of Chickamauga was about 50,000, a force somewhat greater than Rosecrans commanded. In the trans-Mississippi department, the force under Kirby Smith in September, 1864, amounted to 76 434 men, of whom upwards of 50,000 were reported present. In July, 1862, the entire rebel force in all parts of the South is put in round numbers at 419,000; in March, 1863, at 454,000 in April, 1864, at 480,000; in August, 1864, at 550,000, in November, 1864, at 443,000. Although, as will be seen above, their armies were nominally stronger in August, 1864, than at any other time, yet their actual strength for service daily, was not above half as great as the figures given. A writer who has given the subject close attention concludes that there were in all about 600,000 different men in the rebel armies during the war. Of these, less than one half came out alive.

The Late Convention.

The Democrats have been holding a Convention at Umatilla, and once or twice we have had something to say about it. Which has been particularly grating to the irascible individual whose dyspeptic growl is heard daily through the Herald. He tells us he has been absent from home for a few days; that in fact he attended the Convention himself; and seems astonished at our having all the presumption, not to say bad taste, to make any remarks about the Democracy while he was gone. The meeting at Umatilla, we are told, was a family affair, and it was none of our business to mention it. Now we're bothered. We had an idea that it was a matter of some slight moment to the "Radicals"; as the Convention was called for the purpose of plotting against them. But it now appears that those terrible denunciations against the "Rump Congress" and its supporters were nothing but pleasantries. They are to be understood entirely in a Pickwickian sense. For of course if they don't concern those against whom they are directed they mean nothing.

All the accounts we have seen of the proceedings of the Convention confirm our former statements in regard to its origin, its purposes and the mode in which it was conducted. The idea was conceived by certain rebel refugees from Missouri who have found an asylum in Grant county. It was communicated to Dow, of the Press, (wonder how Dow got the title of "Colonel," and if his commission bears the signature of "President" Davis?) who sanctioned it and published the call in his paper. The "constitutional lawyers" who originated the scheme, wanted an opportunity to talk about their "rights." The original object was to have "high old rebel meeting." But the "conservative" portion of the party, which means those who dishonestly suppress their real sentiments, were afraid to let things go on in this manner, and accordingly set their wits at work to devise a way to smother the Convention. Humason came down here in haste to see what could be done, and after night's consultation returned with the dyspeptic individual aforesaid, and the two, reinforced by Gates, went to Umatilla. Assisted by one or two more whose craft was equal to their own, they persuaded the enthusiastic "refugees" who were present that if they ever expected to get office they must for the present suffer in silence, for a disclosure of their political opinions would be utterly fatal to their hopes. These tactics prevailed, for who ever knew a Democrat who would not disown his principles for the sake of an office? The plan worked satisfactorily, and the Convention resolved not to avow any principles for the present, not knowing what sort of principles would be best suited to their purposes. In this way a Democratic Convention, got up after the old fashion and intended to reaffirm the principles for which its authors had fought against the "Yankee hirelings" was utterly spoiled. True Democracy was smothered and "orderly conservatism" carried the day.

STATE ITEMS.

A protracted meeting was lately held in Clackamas county, ten miles east of Oregon City, by R Bailes and P. R Bennett of the Christian Church, resulting in the baptism of fifteen persons

Senator Williams spoke at Salem yesterday (Wednesday) The papers published in the several towns where he has addressed the people say that his speeches have produced a profound impression, completely vindicating the justness and wisdom of the Congressional policy of reconstruction.

The Unionist has information that the crops are very short along the stage road through Benton and Linn counties. In some fields there will be an entire failure, and stock has already been turned into pasture on the stunted grain Through a portion of Linn and Marion counties showers were more frequent in the early part of the season, and there is a better promise of a fair yield.

The Jacksonville Press says The Mulkent ledge, on Canyon creek, opposite Kilbyville, is turning out gloriously. Mr Malsehl hauled 3,600 pounds of what he considered the poorest rock, to Cohn's mill, for crushing, from which he realized 8 ounces and $10 He said before testing it, that if that rock paid "he was all right" as he had an abundance of rock of a much better quality.

The Unionist has the following: Mr E. J. Northcut, master of a pack train in the Government employ, in Eastern Oregon and Idaho, wrote to his wife, now residing in South Salem, under July 15th, informing her that a number of articles had been found near his camp on south of the Malheur river, under circumstances which led him to believe that some one had been murdered at that place. The articles were a bible, twenty-five photographs, a towel, an inkstand, and a work on the Elements of Geology, by Alonzo Gray, A M Upon the fly-leaf of the last named book, which Mr Northcut sent out and sent to this office, is written in three places the following: "George E. Strong, Salem, Oregon, Dec 6th, 1865" Also the following: "Sententia—Patentia et sudustria omnes res conficerint

BOLD ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE.—The Idaho World of the 24th ult., relates the following:

We mentioned in our issue of last Wednesday that Deputy Sheriff Coon, of Union county, assisted by Mat. Rice, of La Grande, Oregon, started from this city with Marshall, who had been arrested here for stealing two horses in Union county—both of which were taken from him when arrested—to take the prisoner to La Grande, for trial, upon a requisition from the Governor of Oregon on Gov. Ballard. A letter written by Mr. Rice, at Miller's station on the Boise and Umatilla road, 95 miles below Boise City, on the night of the 18th, to Sheriff Crutcher, of this place, gives information of a sharp, bold trick the prisoner attempted on his guards, and of the manner in which they frustrated it. As the statement of Mr. Rice goes, the prisoner, just before he reached Snake river crossing, at Old's ferry, complained of severe headache and begged that his handcuffs be taken off in order that he might bathe his head in the stream. Sheriff Coon complied with this request in a spirit of mercy. But just after the parties were aboard the ferry boat and she was shoved into the stream, Marshall seized a pole, and leaped overboard. He had the shackles and chain about his ankles; but proved himself an expert swimmer with his feet so hampered. In a jiffy, Rice drew his revolver and ordered Marshall to make for the shore. The fellow disregarded the order. Rice fired. Still Marshall swam out and down stream. He threw the pole between his head and the boat, to guard against the shots. Rice continued the fire. One ball struck the pole near Marshall's head. He ducked, came up, shouted that he was shot, and begged that a skiff be sent to his rescue. But all the while he kept shoving on down stream. There was no means of getting to him from the ferry boat. On the side she was to land there was no skiff; there was one on the opposite side. To the Idaho shore Coon returned by the ferry, got the skiff, and with some men about there started after his prisoner. The fellow showed himself no sardine—he was a whale on the swim, ducking, coming up to blow, and down again to avoid shots, and never failing to make headway down the river. Sheriff Coon and his party ashore and in the skiff went a weary three miles pull down the river before they got Marshall; but they did capture him finally. After his capture he did some voluble cursing at the treachery of a pal who had agreed to be ready along that part of the river with a skiff, to pick him up and take him on down beyond the likelihood of re arrest. Had this been done it is quite certain he would have made his escape. It will be rough for that pal if Marshall ever catches him. Further trouble was apprehended before they would get their bird to La Grande, by the officers; but it is quite safe to predict he is in jail there, or dead, or badly hurt. Marshall is a desperate man. He came within an ace of giving the officer who arrested him here the contents of a six shooter, and only a quicker pull saved the officer. But when Judge Wilson shall consign him to the Oregon penitentiary, where that eleven-pound Gardiner shackle is eternally fastened around one ankle of the convict, Marshall will be very likely to stop calaraping for awhile.

THE SANTIAM MINES.—The Record has the following:

We are glad to learn that the mines on the Santiam are to be fully tested again this summer; not by the outlay of the money of our citizens, but by the intelligent labor of skilled miners from Washoe, who have come hither to judge for themselves of their value, and if satisfied, to remain to fully develope them.

A few days since, we gave an account of a party of practical miners from Arizona, who were fitting out to spend the summer in the Cascade mountains This is another company, consisting of two gentlemen named Salmon and another; all three being practical miners and mill men. Mr. Salmon is a thorough and scientific amalgamator. The party have visited the mine and mill, and formed their opinion, and the Union Company has granted them the privilege of using the mill to test the mines and offer them the ore in the mill—about seventy tons—to experiment upon; the company to be at no expense for the working, and to have no claim upon the proceeds.

By this means the mines will soon be thoroughly tested by experienced men; and if the prospect proves favorable, an arrangement can be made with them to keep the mill in operation.

Mr. Salmon found the mill in excellent order, and says it is a first class mill for its size—as good a mill as he ever saw—which reflects credit upon Mr. Seibert, the late Superintendent. It is the opinion of this gentleman that the pulp has been worked too much, so as to destroy the effect of quicksilver; he thinks the gold can be saved with less effort than has been used.

There is so general an interest felt in the Santiam mines that the result of these gentlemen's labors will be eagerly watched for.

A short time ago, as we learn from a San Francisco paper, the Chinese at work on the Central Pacific Railroad struck for eight hours a day and forty dollars a month. The contractors telegraphed to New York, and will probably introduce 10,000 laborers, blacks it is said, from the Atlantic side.

A UNIVERSAL REMEDY.—"BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" for Coughs, Colds, and Bronchial Affections, now stands the first in public favor and confidence, this result has been acquired by a test of many years. Its merits and extensive use have caused the Troches to be counterfeited and we would caution purchasers to be on their guard against worthless imitations.

PERFECTLY ENRAPTURING.—Such were our feelings as we stepped into the Music and Art Gallery of W. T. SHANAHAN, on First street, a few days since, and listened to the delightful tones and harmony which came from one of Mason & Hamlin's Cabinet Organs. From the soft breathing flute tones to the thundering bass of the pipe organ, all was equally free and sweet. And why is it other makers cannot produce instruments like these? Mason & Hamlin were the first to introduce the Cabinet Organ, and have gained such world-wide notoriety that it requires the work of two large factories to supply the demand for these valuable instruments

Moved and carried that a committee be appointed by the chair to draft resolutions relative to the decease of the late Bishop Scott.

The President appointed the Executive Committee to perform this duty.

Moved that the discussion of subjects be limited to one hour each. Carried.

The Association then took up the subject entitled "Method of Conducting Recitations," which was introduced by Mr. Warren, of Portland. Questions were asked by Messrs. Matteon, Smith and others. Messrs. Kingston of Clackamas, Martin, of Linn, Smith, of Douglas, McMichael, of Linn, gave their experience on the subject.

AFTERNOON SESSION—2 P. M.

The Association was called to order by the President.

The subject of Education and Reading was again taken up and discussed by Messrs. Matteon and Garlick.

The next subject in order was Algebra, introduced by Prof. Frambes, of Portland. Inquiries were made by Messrs. Matteon, Warren, Persham and Finlayson. Much discussion resulted in regard to a minus term multiplied by a minus term. Considerable interest was manifested in this discussion.

Prof. Matteon moved that this Institute select a locality for its next annual meeting. Carried.

Prof. Henderson named Eugene City.

The vote being taken, resulted in the choice of Eugene City.

Prof. T. M. Gatch then opened the discussion in regard to the co-education of the sexes.

Remarks were made by Professors Frambes, Henderson and Persham.

All the speakers thus far favored the co-education. Mr. McMichael here introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this Institute, the co-education of the sexes is in accordance with the arrangement of the great teacher.

On this resolution Dr. Atkinson made some remarks illustrating the separate education of the sexes in the Academy and College.

Messrs. Warren, Anderson and Matteon also spoke on the resolution.

Judge Smith, being present, was requested to give his views upon the subject, and spoke very ably in favor of the co-education of the sexes.

After some further discussion, Professor Matteon offered the following resolution as a substitute for the resolution offered by Prof Mitchland:

Resolved, That this Association considers the co-education of the sexes, in the same literary classes, as the most correct, both according to sound philosophy and ultimate results, and also in accordance with the general plan of the Great Teacher.

The substitute was accepted and adopted by the Institute.

Physical Education was the subject next presented for the consideration of the Association, by Prof. Finlayson.

Prof. Smith also recommended the general practice of Physical teaching in our public schools.

The hour of adjournment having arrived the subject was laid over for the morning session.

Oral Instruction by Professor Warren.

The Institute adjourned to meet Thursday morning at 9 o'clock A. M.

WILLAMETTE FREIGHTS.—Arrival per steamer Senator from Oregon City, Wednesday, July 31st: 3 bales wool, 77 horse products, 17 hhf bbls do, 852 qr sks flour, 4 bales woolen goods, 2 cases do, 1 horse, 5 gunnies bacon, 1 roll bedding, 1 case mdse, 4 axles, 27 boxes green fruit.

THE CORNER-STONE CEREMONY.—We are authorized to state that the ceremony of laying the corner-stone of the new Methodist Episcopal Centenary Church will be performed to-day at 2 o'clock P M. This structure when finished will be by far, the finest church edifice in this State, and will be a credit to the city and worthy of the denomination who will worship in it. We have frequently heard words of wonderment that the Methodist Church here should be first in numbers and second to none in influence or progress, but if we reflect a little we remember that the parent body sent their missionaries here thirty years ago, and that though they failed in the first object of their labors the universal combination of the natives, they have met a splendid realization, in laying broad and deep the foundations of denominational power. The few dollars expended by the Methodist Missionary Society in Oregon will be returned to them an hundred fold—and to-day when Bishop Thompson shall lay the corner-stone he will only be doing for the new Church building what Jason Lee, Leslie, Hines, Parrish, Waller, and others did for the ancient community of Oregon a quarter of a century ago. We have heard many sweets about the early Methodist Missionaries here but their marks follow them.

RECORDER'S COURT.—Joe Andrews, a half breed was up yesterday morning on the charge of being drunk and disorderly—breaking the doors and windows of his mother's house. He was found guilty but sentence was reserved till this morning.

Ambrose Williams was charged with selling liquor to a half-breed. Decision was reserved till this morning. Williams is an inoffensive, and half demented sort of fellow, and was probably unaware of committing any offence. The liquor was sold to John Andrews, with whom he has been at work for some time.

Charles Dulitel was charged by Mrs. Dulselmacher with stealing from her house $128 in greenbacks and coin. At the time of his arrest his person and premises were searched but without discovering anything to fix the charge upon him, and as upon the examination there was no circumstantial evidence against him, he was discharged. There appeared to be but little doubt that the complainant had been robbed, but there was nothing shown to fix the guilt upon the defendant.

HAMLET IN A MELTING MOOD.—It is probable that the climate of Denmark was not by any means so torrid as that we are now experiencing, for had Hamlet lived here he would never have had cause to utter the wish

"O, that this too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw and resolve itself into a dew."

Had he been in the flesh in Portland, yesterday, and had unale that wish, he would have been a melted man in less than a minute.

AN INDIAN GOD.—Jack Allphin received yesterday from a friend down the Columbia, an uncouth figure carved out of cedar, something in the shape of a man, and designed to represent a Siwash god. It was taken, we are told, from the ancient grave of a chief. As a specimen of carving it is scarcely equal to Powers' Greek Slave, but yet it displays some degree of rude skill and imagination. Jack has it set up on his pedestal in his saloon on Front street.

MILITARY.—The steamer Troup will come over early to-day, making an extra trip, to bring over Capt. Kelly's company of Cavalry which is about to take up the line of march for Fort Klamath. The Troup made an extra trip yesterday morning, bringing over army stores belonging to the company, and will make another trip to-morrow. Capt Kelly will probably be ready to march in two or three days. He goes by land from this city.

THE WEATHER.—The heat of yesterday and the day before was the subject of very general complaint in this city, but farmers represent that is just the thing for the crops, as it will hasten the ripening of all early crops and thus assist the formation of rust. In the open streets yesterday afternoon the heat was intense, the day being the hottest of the season.

LATER.—"Supplemental returns" on the base ball question, determine that there are eleven clubs in this city, without counting the "Light-Weights." Apropos to this, we learn that the conservative citizens of East Portland and Milwaukie are taking steps to have those villages vaccinated as a preventive of the spread to them, of the base ball contagion.

POSTAL.—Special Agent Q. A. Brooks will start this morning for Walla Walla, to make arrangements for starting the Colville mail again, and to attend to such other postal matters as may require his attention. The mails to Colville will have to be carried, for the present, by special arrangement, the regular contractor having failed to come to time.

CATTLE FROM OUR SIDE.—One of the Victoria papers says that up to July 1st, no less than 4,800 sheep and 800 beef cattle have been bought at that city from the American side since the first of January, and comments that this is paying no heavy tribute to "our American cousin." The greater part of this stock was driven over from Oregon.

GREEN CORN.—The first green corn of the season, of growth west of the Cascades, was brought into market yesterday morning from Sauvie's Island. Roasting ears grown near the Dalles, have been in the market for two or three days.

ICE.—The hot weather of this week has started up a brisk demand for ice and prices are decidedly firm. It retails, we believe, at about six cents pents per pound. At Victoria it is ten cents.

REFRESHMENTS.—Quimby, of the American Exchange, who knows how to keep a hotel, has the thanks of all hands for some refreshments sent up at a very opportune hour last evening.

A SURPRISE PARTY.—Quite a large party visited the residence of Rev. Mr. Stratton, Monday evening, and left with him $125 in coin and about $30 in presents as tokens of esteem.

THE OPERA.—The first evening of the Opera will be Saturday, the 3d. Reserved seats can be procured at the office at Oro Fino Hall, from 10 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M. of each day.

FRUIT.—The attaches of this office unite in thanks to Miller, fruit dealer at the corner of Washington and First streets, for a box of plums, pears and cherries, sent up yesterday.

REMOVAL.—The office of the Bank of British Columbia was moved yesterday into the new building on Front street.

THE ATLANTIC BASE BALL CLUB will meet to-day for practice at the Pioneer's grounds at 1½ o'clock precisely.

TO SAIL.—The steamship Oriflamme will sail for San Francisco Monday, August 5th, at 7 o'clock P. M.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—Sheriff Seltzel will sell on Thursday, August 1st at 10 A. M., at Silas L. Adams' place on Sauvie's Island, Multnomah county, six head of horses, five head of cattle, fifteen head of hogs, and one set of harness, taken on execution. Sale for U. S. gold coin.

If, as the old adage declares, "Health is the Greatest earthly Blessing," then every effort to preserve it pay well.

DRAKE'S PLANTATION BITTERS

Have been of great service in making people healthy, and keeping them so. They should be found in every household.

They give tone to the Stomach, vigor to the body, and remove dark doubts and unhappy feel

Lightning Strokes Painless

It is a mistaken notion that an impression upon the nerves—a blow, for example, or the prick of a pin—is felt at the moment it is inflicted The nerves are not the repositories of sensation, they are but the conductors of the motion which produces sensation The boat of sensation is the brain, and to it the intelligence of any injury done to the nerves has to be transmitted before that injury becomes manifest in consciousness The transmission, moreover, requires time, and the consequence is that a wound inflicted at a portion of the body distant from the brain is more tardily appreciated than one inflicted adjacent to the brain By an ingenious experimental arrangement, Helmholtz has determined the velocity of nervous transmission, both in warm blooded and cold blooded animals. In a frog, he found the velocity to be about eighty feet a second, or less than one thirteenth of the velocity of sound in air If this holds good, as it probably does, in the case of the whale, then a creature of this class eighty feet long, if wounded in the tail, would not, as Helmholtz remarked, be conscious of the injury till a second after the wound had been inflicted But this is not the only ingredient in the delay that occurs between the impression on the nerves and the consciousness of the impression. There can scarcely be a doubt that to every act of consciousness belongs a determinate molecular arrangement of the brain—that every thought or feeling has its physical correlative in that organ, and nothing can be more certain than that every physical change, whether molecular or mechanical requires time for its accomplishment So that, even after the intelligence of an impression, made on a distant portion of the body, has reached the brain, a still further time is necessary for the brain itself to put its house in order—for its molecules to take up the position necessary to the completion of consciousness Helmholtz considers one-tenth of a second necessary for that purpose Thus, in the case of the whale, we have a second consumed in the transmission of intelligence through the sensor nerves from the tail to the brain, one-tenth of a second is required by the brain to become conscious of the intelligence received and if the velocity of transmission through the motor be the same as that through the sensor nerves, a second would be consumed in sending a command to the tail to defend itself. Say more than two seconds would elapse before an impression made upon its caudal nerves could be responded to by a whale eighty feet [illegible]

Now it is quite conceivable that an injury might [illegible] cell which would render the nerves [illegible] the conductors of the motion which results in sensation, and if such a thing occurred, [illegible] how severe the injury might be, we [illegible] conscious of it. Or it may be that [illegible] the time required for the brain itself [illegible] the arrangement necessary for the act [illegible] ess, its power of arrangement might be [illegible] ended In such case, also, though the [illegible] the of such a nature as to cause death [illegible] occur not only without pain, but [illegible] without feeling of any kind Death [illegible] also, would be simply the sudden stoppage [illegible] complished without any interval of [illegible] Doubtless, there are many kinds of this character The passage [illegible] bullet through the brain is a case in point [illegible] acid aspect of a man thus killed [illegible] cordance with the conclusion which [illegible] from the experiments [illegible] sensibility, moreover, [illegible] mon, which do not result in death and [illegible] which the person affected have [illegible] that no pain was felt prior to the insensibility

The [illegible] red for a rifle-bullet to pass through a man's head may be roughly estimated at [illegible] of a second Here, therefore, we shall [illegible] room for sensation, and death would be past But there are other actions which [illegible] rapidity the rifle bullet. A flash of [illegible] appearing and disappearing in a hundred thousandth of a second [illegible] electricity is such as would [illegible] that occupied by an [illegible] continues to be seen for a fifth of a [illegible] flash has become extinct and the [illegible] is illuminated he in no time It appears [illegible] the place which it occupied when the flash [illegible]

The [illegible] are far to most of us. By the instantaneous [illegible] with differently colored sectors [illegible] rapidly; the colors [illegible] together and [illegible] are chosen in the proper [illegible] necessary [illegible] will light, the disc appears [illegible] when [illegible] is sufficiently rapid Such [illegible] a dark room, and illuminated by a [illegible] spark, appears motionless, each distinct [illegible] being clearly seen Professor Dove has found that a flash of lightning produces the same effect During a thunder storm he put a color-top [illegible] rapid motion, and found, that every flash revealed the top as motionless object with all its distinct If illuminated solely by a flash of lightning, the motion of all bodies on the earth's surface would, as Dove has remarked, appear suspended A common ball, for example would have the flight apparently arrested, and seem to hang motionless in [illegible] as long as the luminous impression which revealed the ball remained upon the eye

If, then a rifle-ball moves with sufficient rapidity to destroy life when [illegible] the interposition of sensation much [illegible] a flash of lightning seem potent to produce [illegible] effect Accordingly, we have well authenticated [illegible] of people being struck senseless by lightning, who, on recovery, had no memory of pain The following circumstantial case is described in the neighborhood of Mannheim [illegible] overtaken by rain, placed himself [illegible] beneath which a woman had previously [illegible] He looked upward to see whether [illegible] were thick enough to afford [illegible] action, and just then was struck by [illegible] and fell senseless to the earth [illegible] his side experienced the shock [illegible] was not struck down Some hours afterward the man revived, but knew nothing [illegible] had occurred, save the fact of having [illegible] the branches This was his last act [illegible] unconscious and he passed from the [illegible] unconscious condition without pain

The [illegible] marks of lightning strokes are occasionally [illegible] the hair is sometimes burnt, slight [illegible] are observed, while in some instances [illegible] red streak marks the track of the discharge [illegible] skin

The effect [illegible] of a shock of artificial lightning upon [illegible] of our acquaintance who is very sensitive to the electric discharge, may be here described Under ordinary circumstances, the [illegible] a small Leyden jar is exceedingly disagreeable Some time ago he happened [illegible] the presence of a numerous audience, when a battery of fifteen large Leyden jars charged [illegible] behind [illegible] ough some awkwardness on his part, he [illegible] so [illegible] which should not be touched, and the [illegible] arge of the battery went through his [illegible] Here life was absolutely blotted out for a [illegible] interval, without a trace of pain. In a moment or two consciousness returned, the recipient of the shocks saw himself in the presence of his audience and apparatus, and by the help of [illegible] collected facts, immediately concluded that [illegible] had received the battery discharge. His natural consciousness of his position was restored [illegible] exceeding rapidity, but not so his optical consciousness To prevent the audience from being alarmed, he observed that it had often been his desire to receive accidentally such a shock, and that his wish had at length been fulfilled. [illegible] while making this remark, the appearance which his body presented to him was that of a number of separate pieces The arms, for example, were detached from the trunk, and seemed suspended in the air. In fact, memory and the power of reasoning appeared to be complete before the optic nerve was restored to healthy action. But what we wish chiefly to dwell upon here is the absolute painlessness of the shock, and there cannot be a doubt that in the case of a person struck dead by lightning the passage from life to death occurs without consciousness being in the least degree implicated It is an abrupt stoppage of sensation, unaccompanied by a pang.

A PRESERVING YANKEE.—A Yankee at St Joseph, Missouri is thus celebrated by the Union of that city The mythological story that Noah found a Yankee grocery in Ararat, after the subsidence of the waters, as illustrative of the enterprise of that peculiar genus, finds a counterpart in the experience of a genuine specimen, who arrived in our city a few weeks since Upon his arrival he commenced stencil cutting on the street, and drove a thriving business, housed under a dilapidated umbrella. The next week found him ensconced in a room, carrying on an intelligence office During the third week he circulated in the double capacity of sewing machine agent and repairer of window shades On the fourth week he branched out as door plate manufacturer, and at the beginning of the next week he hung out his shingle as attorney and counsellor at law. It is expected that he will run for Congress at the next election

We are glad to hear from an exchange that the General F J Herron implicated in the financial troubles of the City National Bank of New Orleans, is not the gallant General F J Horron, originally of this city, but an ex rebel officer of the same name and title.

VENUS.—The transit of Venus over the sun's disc which last took place on the 3d of June, 1769, will again happen on the 8th of December, 1874, and is already engaging the thoughts of the astronomers It affords a direct observation of the planet's node, or point where its orbit cuts the ecliptic, an element which is of great value for the correction of astronomical tables but it is chiefly important for the determination of the sun's parallax (or angle under which an observer, situated in the center of the sun, might see the earth's radius)

A LARGE ESTABLISHMENT.—The largest hard ware manufactory in the United States at New Haven, gives employment to 800 hands, and turns out 4 000 different kinds of articles, worth from $4,000,000 to $7 000,000 per year
